

Daily Announcements – Friday June 21

Music this morning was a cover of Blackbird by The Beatles sung by Emma Stevens, a Nova Scotia teen of Eskasoni Nation in the Mi'Kmaq language.

On National Indigenous Peoples Day, we can celebrate by learning about and honoring the diverse cultures, traditions, and contributions of Indigenous Peoples. This can include attending local events, supporting Indigenous artists and businesses, educating oneself on Indigenous history and issues, and advocating for reconciliation and Indigenous rights.

Words of Wisdom - "Every day is a good day to celebrate who you are." - this quote was said by Buffy Sainte-Marie, a Cree musician, singer-songwriter, and activist. This quote encourages embracing one's identity and heritage every day, highlighting the importance of self-celebration and cultural pride within Indigenous communities. "

Good Morning from the Visual Arts Department! We are excited to announce a Clear Out Student Sale! The art club is having an incredible sale TODAY, featuring beautiful pieces all under $5! Don't miss this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity!
